Starvation induces a translocation of the transcription factor TBP from the nucleus to the cytoplasm in Saccharomyces cerevisiae. The transcription factor TBP, part of the TFIID complex, has been previously shown to be associated with the cytoplasmic poly(A) ribonucleoprotein (PAP) complex of Saccharomyces cerevisiae, which is involved in mRNA 3'-end polyadenylation. Here we show that TBP also associates with PAP in starved cells, when the concentration of this complex is increased because of the translocation of a significant amount of PAP from the nucleus to the cytoplasm. Furthermore, RNA-affinity chromatography of nuclear extracts showed that TBP binds to the 3'-untranslated region (UTR) of HSP26 mRNA (hereafter HSP26) but not to the 3'-UTR of MPB2 mRNA (HSE1), which is not polyadenylated. Together, our data indicate that TBP is recruited to PAP complexes during the starvation response and suggests that TBP plays a role in the 3'-polyadenylation of specific mRNAs.The first time I really explored the country I took a bus from Ben Berg's town (Emla) to the fjord Vemundafjordur. The fjord was really interesting with fjord-like mountains and fjord-like trees, but when I had arrived it was too late to swim in the waters as they were frozen. I wasn't allowed to walk around the area during the time it was snowing and the fjord was therefore hidden. Later on I had to visit the area again, this time a lot easier as it had been many years since I had been there. Local Food Project to Hand Out 10,000 Pounds of Free Produce Traditionally, fruits and vegetables are deemed to be luxury items, something that you should always have in the refrigerator and can enjoy on a daily basis. However, the reality is that fruits and vegetables are one of the most important parts of a healthy diet. "The things we put in our bodies, whether it's good or bad, really affect our well-being. So we encourage people to add fruits and vegetables into their diets regularly," said Anna Janz, a founding member of FoodShare Project SA, a volunteer-based food sharing project in the Oswego and Ontario regions. For the past three weeks, Janz and her FoodShare Project colleagues have been working with Oswego-area residents, helping them to get in touch with local growers and finding ways to distribute the fresh fruits and vegetables. This past week marked the culmination of the three-week effort, which included organizing a food drive, distribution of surplus produce, and the distribution of door hangers inviting people to come and pick up their share of fresh produce. FoodShare Project SA was able to bring in a total of 7,540 pounds of food, including 2,818 pounds of fresh produce, 3,513 pounds of canned goods, 939 pounds of dry pasta and beans, and 981 pounds of dry cereal. It's estimated that the FoodShare Project distributed 110,000 pounds of food in the three weeks. All of this fresh produce is currently in the process of being donated to local food pantries, retirement communities and homeless shelters. "I feel like the FoodShare Project has really made a huge impact in the community. For example, I was in the Oswego City Hall today, and I found out that there was a small community garden there," said Janz. "And last week at the Oswego Farmers' Market, I met an older lady, and she told me that the FoodShare Project came to her home and she has been picking fresh fruits and veggies ever since. It's just really gratifying to be able to bring good food to people." To mark the end of the FoodShare Project, FoodShare Project SA is inviting residents to come and pick up their shares of fresh produce at the Central Square Food Bank on Nov. 17 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.
