What's new in Jaunt:

ran a first round playoff game on my iPad. I came in a little too late to log in and add it to my calendar. This is the main screen. It didn't work at all the first time I tried to play it. I think they had a problem with the Slideshare account that was used to preload the playlist. I played it the second time - they loaded a big playlist on my iPad, but the controls wouldn't work at all - no stopping, no pausing, no skipping anything. I would expect this to be a problem any time you use another player's playlist. It's quite a coincidence, though, that Jaunt's first game of the playoffs ran into this issue. I also know other teams are having problems with Jaunt, and I have heard reports of the same thing happening in-stadium and with Chromecast. There's a lot of complications, which means you are guaranteed to have something to complain about for both the wireless connection and for the streaming company. It also means that any great streaming experience you enjoy with these services is not likely to last through the playoffs. However, because of the great (negative) advertisements, I am willing to live with the new difficulties as I become more familiar with the various streaming companies. Additionally, having worked in the broadcast industry for a few years I have always thought that there's nothing more convenient than being able to switch between multiple sources. I have been using Jaunt as a way to add events and pre-recorded shows to my calendar and to listen live while I play in my spare time. The system can gather information from the network where you watch your favorite shows. Microsoft has been in touch with the television networks, and find out that they already collect data on the usage. They realized that such analytics on TV can help the television network and the advertisers. Microsoft warns that such data collecting is against their user's privacy and it plans to ask television networks to modify their privacy policies. Terry Myerson, head of the Windows and PC group, said that the data collection is an understandable part of the new TV ecosystem. According to Stefan Weitz, co-founder and CEO of Jaunt, "Jaunt launched with the right information
