Your favourite sounds up in a piece of the internet within the music you want, and youâ€™re ready to bootstrap. is it just me or is the new tomtom. Updated to v55136.Q: How to stop the import of child module I'm currently using a system of "loading" modules, and I am failing to stop the loading of a particular module. Let's say I have a main module, and 3 sub modules (A, B, C). main module loads A and B A loads C B loads C After all of these are loaded, I need to stop B from loading C A loads C (this is expected) After B is loaded, I need to stop it loading C No matter how much times I use "stop_load()" B will always load C (and the stack trace will show that B is the starting function for that system) What's the best way to fix this? Is there a way to stop child modules from loading more than once? A: Assign imported module attributes to the "main" module # "a.py" # add module attribute, to be used by main module a = __import__('A').A # now, import it from B import C # Do stuff # now, don't load A's C anymore del a.C / * * This file is part of the SAMRAI distribution.
